Students will learn the economic factors that lead to the practice of slavery and the cultural influence that will influence America until this day. See how a nation grows and learn about the greatest leaders and documents of our time, such as the Declaration of Independence, Constitution, and the Bill of Rights. Project Citizen

1 Elective Unit

As citizens in the 21st century, we are able to experience major movements (social, political, economic) in real time. While adults have the ability to watch, process, and understand, what do our students see?

The goal of this course is to provide an environment where students can thoughtfully unpack the events taking place in front of them through research, critical thinking, discussion, and action. This student led, student engaged experience will pull resources ranging from the Constitution to Twitter in hopes to gain as much perspective as possible and allow students to make decisions based on evidence from the past and present. This is a semester long, two period block and is located on the Innovation Campus. Enrollment is limited.
